TWO PHYSICISTS ELECTED TO ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA

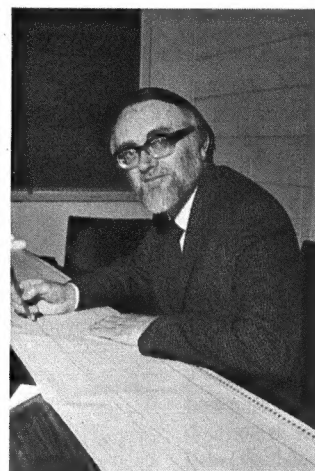

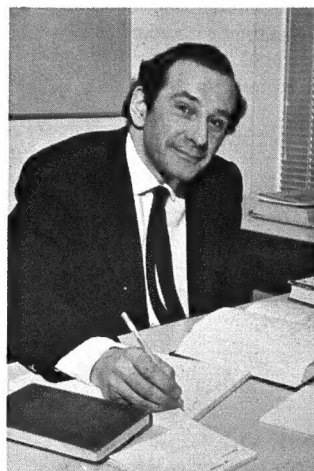

D. IAN GOUGH and WERNER ISRAEL, both Professors of Physics at the University, have been elected Fellows of the Royal Society of Canada.

Professor Gough is in the Department of Physics. His election was to the Earth Sciences section, to which only three people in all of Canada are elected each year.

Considered by his colleagues to be a superb instrumentalist, his inventions in this field have had a wide application from local problems in civil engineering to continent-wide studies in geodesy. His magnetometer array studies have done much to elucidate difficult problems of tectonic processes under continents. The Gough studies of loading and earthquakes related to the building of the Kariba Dam led to reservoir controls that averted major damage to the structure. A parallel study on the Bennett Dam indicates the area is tectonically as well as politically stable.

Professor Gough also serves as Associate Director of the Institute of Earth and Planetary Physics at the University.

Dr. Israel, formerly of the Department of

Werner Israel
D. Ian Gough

Mathematics at the University, is one of three persons from all of Canada elected to the Physics section of the Royal Society of Canada this year.

He has made several contributions to general relativity theory and relativistic astrophysics, and his research has won him international acclaim. In 1968, Dr. Israel proved a theorem, the event horizon theorem, on the nature of spacetime singularities, which has given an entirely new perspective to the problem of gravitational collapse and has sparked much new research in Canada and abroad.

This year he is Chairman of the Theoretical Physics division of the Canadian Association of Physicists.

CLINIC OPENS DOORS TO LEARNING-DISABLED CHILD

There was a time when children with learning problems were placed in one of two distinct categories. They were considered either to be mentally defective, or to have suffered some sort of experiential deprivation. Any children who didn't fit neatly into one of these two categories were written off as simply lacking the necessary motivation to learn.

It has only been within the last few years that a third type of problem—the learning disability—has been recognized. Services for children with this type of disability are now being provided through the Learning and Development Clinic at The University of Alberta.

The clinic, located on the seventh floor of the Education Centre, began operations in January of this year. According to Mrs. JANE SILVIUS, Co-ordinator of the clinic, it is interdisciplinary in nature and provides services for children with a variety of learning difficulties, including specific learning disabilities, emotional disturbance, mental retardation, and various behavior problems.

Some time ago, the staff of the University's Centre for the Study of Mental Retardation began to explore the possibility of creating a clinic of this kind. E. E. MC COY, Chairman of the Department of Paediatrics; J. P. DAS, Director of the Centre; and G. M. KYSELA, Professor of Educational Psychology, met with representatives of various city agencies and established the need for such a facility.

The new clinic is a direct outcome of those discussions. Its interdisciplinary emphasis makes expertise in many fields available to children brought in for evaluation and remediation. In addition to this service to the children of Edmonton and surrounding areas, the clinic functions as a training facility for student interns from education, paediatrics, rehabilitation medicine, counselling, and many other departments within the University. When their professional training is completed, these students will work with handicapped children.

At present, the clinic staff is seeing approximately 10 children per month. These are referred through the public and separate school boards, the Department of Public Health, and several other agencies within the city.

"To evaluate a child's difficulties, we begin with a half-day preliminary screening session," says Mrs. Silvius. "After the clinic psychologist, students involved in the assessment, and I have reviewed the child's medical and developmental history and information derived from the initial screening, a case conference is called.

"At this conference, a decision is made as to whether to refer the child to one of the many consultants who are making their special services available to the clinic for further diagnosis and specific remedial treatment, or to begin a program of psycho-educational remediation immediately."

When a child is referred to a resource specialist, treatment procedures are carried out under his supervision. If remediation is to begin immediately, says Mrs. Silvius, it can be handled in a number of ways. The child may come to the clinic for two hours each week for individual sessions with a clinician; a program may be implemented in the home, with the help of the parents; or a remedial program may be initiated in the school, in collaboration with the child's teacher. In some cases, the program will involve a combination of all three alternatives.

In addition to this type of remedial programming, genetic counselling also is available in cases where it is deemed desirable.

Although the services provided by the clinic are presently limited to approximately 10 children per month, plans for expansion are being worked out.

"When we become adequately endowed financially we plan to make our resources available to many more children. Attention is presently focused on children of pre-school and early elementary years, in order to prevent the development of greater difficulties. This is possible in many cases if treatment of learning deficits is begun early. We are very much interested in working with older children as well, however, and we do plan to include them in our diagnostic and remedial programs in the future," says Mrs. Silvius.

"This clinic was started at the University to express concern for the welfare and needs of the larger community, including Edmonton and the surrounding areas. Its objective is to establish a model service program of high quality which will eventually be available to a broader geographical area. With this goal in view, the projected Outreach Programs of the clinic are as follows:

1. To provide group counselling to parents of children with learning and developmental problems.
2. To organize and instruct volunteer aide groups for facilitation of remedial programs within the community.
3. To conduct teacher workshops and in-service training sessions.
4. To train para-professional personnel who will conduct initial preventive screening programs within the community, in order to identify children with potentially debilitating learning and developmental deficits which may be ameliorated by early intervention.

5. To conduct epidemiological studies to discover the incidence of learning and developmental problems in the general population.

6. To set up mobile diagnostic teams which will go to remote areas with representative clinic services offered to children who are unable to come to the clinic.

"The proposal for the above services will develop over a period of three years. It will require some financial commitment by the government," says Mrs. Silvius, "but we believe that the amount required for diagnosis, remediation, and prevention of developmental defects appears to be quite small in comparison with the benefits that would accrue through these programs."

HENRY MARSHALL TORY LECTURE TO BE HELD THIS SPRING

For the first time since its inception in 1956, the Henry Marshall Tory Lecture will be held in the spring of the year. Sponsored by the Friends of the University, it is scheduled for Wednesday, May 3 at 8 p.m. in the Students' Union Building Theatre.

This year's lecturer will be ZELMAN COWEN, Q.C., Vice-Chancellor of the University of Queensland in Australia since 1970. His topic will be "The conscience stirs: the aborigine in Australian society."

Dr. Cowen was educated at Scotch College, Melbourne, and the University of Melbourne, where he received a Bachelor of Arts and Master of Laws degree. He obtained his Master of Arts and Doctor of Comparative Law degrees at Oxford University, as well as an Honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the University of Hong Kong. He was elected a Rhodes Scholar for Victoria in 1940.

In 1941 Dr. Cowen entered the Royal Australian Naval Volunteer Reserve, retiring as a Lieutenant in 1945. He was named Vinerian Scholar at Oxford in 1947 and was a Fellow of Oriol College at Oxford from 1947 to 1950. He was Professor of Public Law and Dean of the Faculty of Law at the University of Melbourne from 1951 to 1966, and Vice-Chancellor and Professor at the University of New England from 1967 to 1970. He also has been guest lecturer and visiting professor at a number of universities in the United States and Australia.

Dr. Cowen has been a member of the Academy of Social Sciences in Australia since 1952. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts in 1971.

NOTICES

AASUA MEETING

The Academic Staff Association will be holding its annual general meeting on Tuesday, May 2, at 8 p.m. in Room PC 126 of the Physics Building.

LIBRARY TO HOLD SPECIAL SEMINAR

The University Library is presenting a special seminar on the services of ERIC (Educational Resources Information Centre) and SPIN (Searchable Physics Information Notices). It will be held in the Penthouse of Cameron Library on May 4, between 1:30 and 4:30 p.m. All interested faculty and students are invited to attend.

VISITOR FOR NUCLEAR RESEARCH CENTRE

CHARLES PERDRISAT of the College of William and Mary will be visiting the Nuclear Research Centre from May 1 to 5 inclusive. During this week Dr. Perdrisat will be giving three talks on: (a) some nuclear structure problems one could solve with intermediate energy projectiles; and (b) quasi-elastic reactions at intermediate energies.

He will also be available throughout the week for consultation and discussions.

COMPUTING SERVICES—NON-CREDIT COURSES

Computing Services is still accepting registrations for the non-credit courses in the computing field which it is offering to staff and students of the University during the Spring Session.

The courses, with a note of time and place, were described in the April 20 issue of FOLIO. For further information, telephone the Computing Services general office, 432-3975, or the Information Co-ordinator, F. CRUDEN, 432-3975.

Registration should be through the general office. A fee of $5 must accompany each registration.

ADULT FITNESS EDUCATION PROGRAM

An intensive and scientific fitness program of theory and exercise for men and women will be offered by the Faculty of Physical Education in co-operation with the Department of Extension starting May 1. Eight sections are planned, each of which offers a concentrated two-week course of ten daily sessions excepting Saturdays and Sundays. Four of the sections will be held between 2 and 4 p.m., and the other four between 7 and 9 p.m.

The course is designed for the average adult who is interested not only in taking part in supervised physical exercise, but also in understanding the requirements of his or her own well-being.

The fee for each section is $45 per person or $75 per husband and wife. Each section has a maximum enrolment of 15 students.
